How to File Your Appeal

1. Call your local city or town assessor's office to request the Application for Appeal of Property Tax form, as Providence County has 39 municipalities each with its own assessor and the specific form depends on your municipality.
2. Complete the Application for Appeal of Property Tax form with property identification details from your tax bill, reason for appeal (overvaluation, data errors, incorrect classification), and supporting evidence including comparable properties or appraisal data.
3. Submit the completed application to your local assessor's office within 90 days from the date the first tax payment is due (typically late August/early September in Rhode Island), ensuring it is received by the office on time as deadlines cannot be extended.
4. The assessor has 45 days to review your appeal and render a decision, during which time you may be asked to provide additional property information or permit an inspection within 30 days of any such request.
5. If the assessor denies your appeal or fails to respond within 45 days, file an appeal with your local Board of Tax Assessment Review (BTAR) within 30 days of the assessor's decision or within 90 days if no decision was rendered.

If You're Called to a Hearing

Bring your Evidence Packet. You'll have 2–3 minutes to make your case. Keep it simple and focus on the comparable sales:

> "Thank you for hearing my appeal. My property at 66 Bingley Terrace is currently appraised by the county at $347,000. However, I've gathered 15 recent sales of similar homes in the area. The 25th percentile price per square foot of these comparable properties is $269. Applied to my home's 1,154 square feet, this supports a market value of approximately $310,215. I've included addresses, sale prices, and details for each comparable in my evidence packet. I respectfully request the Board adjust my assessment to reflect actual market conditions."

Tips: Be polite and factual. Focus only on whether your property's value is correct compared to similar homes that recently sold.

Note: Filing requirements may change. We recommend confirming all deadlines, forms, and contact information with your county assessor's office before submitting your appeal.
